Studying abroad is the most effective way for students to develop valuable skills. They experience different cultures, languages, environments, and educational systems. It teaches students to appreciate differences and diversity. It enables them to recognize – and then dismiss – stereotypes they may have held about people they had never met.

Learning how to interact with people from other countries and cultures equips future leaders in all sectors to address urgent issues – from curing diseases and finding energy solutions, to fighting terrorism and hunger – across borders.
