REQUIREMENTS:

A list of the principle activities that a student will be required to complete in the class, including but not limited to reading assignments, writing assignments, tests, and examinations. Does your department/school specify necessary types of activities for courses taught by more than one faculty member?

INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES:

A list of the instructional strategies that will be used, such as lecture and discussion for a face-to-face class, or videotaped lecture and blogging for an online class. Note that while this section is important for all types of classes, it is particularly important for online classes since accreditation agencies consider the electronic medium substantively different from the traditional classroom environment; therefore it is expected that online courses will use strategies that are substantively different from those used in face-to-face classes.

GRADES:

Description of grading procedures for the course, if applicable. Does your department/school specify necessary types of evaluation for courses taught by more than one faculty member?

Textbooks and Other Required Materials:

Does your department/school specify texts for courses taught by more than one faculty member? (If not, please specify that the instructor may choose the text.)
